KERR TO STAY ON AT UC

WEEKLY WASHOUT--The rain wouldn't go away and this was the bleak scene which greeted those unfortunate weather forecasters who happened to turn out for the annual Beachcomber's Holiday Saturday.

Keep Kerr movement helps

Strong support from the University's academic community--students, faculty and administrators--helped lay the way for President Clark Kerr to withdraw his resignation.

Evidence of solid opposition to the resignations of both Kerr and Berkeley Chancellor Martin Meyerson--in the form of petitions, resolutions and telegrams--was presented to the Board of Regents Saturday afternoon as it met in emergency session.

As the Regents walked into University Hall on the Berkeley campus for the meeting, they were greeted by some 200 students.

President, Meyerson withdraw resignations

President Clark Kerr is expected to remain head of the University at least through the remainder of the year.

Kerr and Berkeley Chancellor Martin Meyerson withdrew their resignations Saturday after a five-hour emergency session with the Board of Regents in Berkeley.

Their sudden resignations last Tuesday, coming after a 6-month long uproar over student political activity, rocked the entire university system.

After the Regents' meeting, which was conducted behind closed doors, Kerr said he and Meyerson had decided to stay on "pending further discussion with the board."

But he also answered "Yes" when asked at a press conference later if he expected to be heading the university system this fall.

Kerr said three students arrested last week at Berkeley for yelling and displaying an obscene four-letter word will be disciplined "in an orderly and prompt manner."

It is reported that Kerr rescinded his resignation only after the Regents withdrew pressure upon him to expel outright the students involved in the so-called Filthy Speech Movement.

Chancellor Vernon L. Cheadle, in an interview with this reporter last week, said,

"If Kerr comes back, it will be on his own terms."

In an explanation of his resignation, Kerr had said, "Due process must have its due place." He also indicated that action against students without due process would lead to another confrontation between students and administrators at Berkeley.

Kerr said after the meeting that the resignations "were made without full opportunity for board consideration, which we regret."

Assembly Speaker, Jesse Unruh, who had urged that the meeting be made public, told reporters that a motion to open it to the press was defeated by an 11-9 vote.

Unruh also told newsmen that two motions--one which would have deferred the resignations until June and another which asked them to withdraw their resignations--were introduced but never came to a vote because of objections over wording.

There apparently was no official motion by the board accepting the resignations or asking that they be rescinded.

The Regents did approve a resolution which reaffirms their policy regarding student discipline. It reads: "Chancellors of all campuses are responsible for enforcing the present University-wide policies on student conduct."

It further declared that students who "fail to make proper use of the opportunities freely given them by the university must expect to have their privileges curtailed or withdrawn."

Another resolution, which called for the dismissal of students who "engage in sit-ins or other conduct that disrupts the University," was withdrawn.

The resolution, which will be resubmitted for action at the next regular board meeting in 10 days, also calls for the dismissal of "teaching assistants who fail to meet their assigned duties in an effort to disrupt university administration teaching or research."

This resolution was introduced by Regent Theodore Meyer, who heads a committee charged with the investigation and reformulations of University-wide policies governing political activity.

FOR SLAIN MINISTER

Students to march in SB

Santa Barbarans will walk down State Street today in a "memory march" for the Boston minister who died after he was beaten by white thugs in Selma, Alabama.

Santa Barbara Mayor Donald McGillivray will address the marchers at a brief rally to be conducted in front of the City Hall. Also speaking will be Eugene Harris, president of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Dorothy Day, editor of the Catholic Daily Worker.

Students for Free Political Action, one of the groups sponsoring the march, have formed a car pool to transport UCSB students to State Street. The cars, which also will make return trips, will leave the loop near the Student Union at 2:30 p.m.

MISSION SERVICE

Rev. Stanislaus Altman, pastor of the Old Mission, will lead public memorial services at the Santa Barbara Mission at 5:45 p.m. today.

The march will begin at 3 p.m. at the Trinity Episcopal Church, Micheltorena and State Streets. It will proceed down State Street to De la Guerra Plaza, where the rally will be held.

Dorothy Day, a force in American Catholicism for more than 25 years, is passing through Santa Barbara on a nation-wide tour of the "houses of hospitality" set up by the Catholic Worker Movement. The author of several books, she recently travelled through the South, stopping in both Mississippi and Alabama.

SFPA Chairman Ted Kornweibel said he has urged UCSB students, faculty members and administrators to attend the rally. Participants should bring their own signs and banners, he said.

SPONSORS

Besides SFPA, the march is sponsored by the Santa Barbara Friends of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the Catholic Human Relations Council, the Congress on Racial Equality, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the Fellowship to Advance Inter-group Relations.

The Santa Barbara mayor's Human Relations Council has officially endorsed the march.

Rev. James J. Reeb, a Unitarian minister who had gone to Selma to protest alleged police brutality against civil rights workers, died Thursday night in a Birmingham, Alabama hospital, where he was taken Tuesday after he was beaten.

A hospital spokesman said the 38-year-old minister, one of three Unitarian clergymen attacked by a group of white men in Selma, died from a blood clot on the left side of the brain. The other ministers were not seriously hurt.

Four Selma men, charged with the murder, were released under $25,000 bond each.

House mom ousted

Four Tahitian Apartments resident assistants threatened to resign last week unless the head resident, Mrs. Everett Gaugh, was replaced, EL GAUCHO learned yesterday.

As this week begins, Mrs. Gaugh is still in residence, but not acting as the official housemother. One of the four RA's has resigned.

Tahitian's owner is on 24-hour call for any emergencies which might arise, with the promise that a substitute soon will be found.

A student in residence at the Tahitian reported that "Mrs. Gaugh tries very hard to be a good housemother, but she just doesn't comprehend the limits of her position."

Others claimed there was "an unpleasant inconsistency in the tedious rules" enforced on the girls. The rules and punishments, termed "stringent" by some of the girls, include weekly mandatory hall meetings. A house minor (infractions only recognized by the Tahitian) was given for more than one absence.

During finals, two University minors (infractions which appear on the students' permanent record) were given "for breaking the solitude of quiet hours," said one girl. Later the housemother retracted the rule, but according to several of the girls, "only after we had already served our punishments."

The girls also complained that the head resident "listened over the intercom to see if we were talking about her." In support of Mrs. Gaugh, one girl stated, "When there is such obvious tension, people sometimes do things that they would normally not consider."

A group of girls related that the "RA's did everything they possibly could to keep the strife from us."

With the assistants' decision to quit, the RA's finally felt it necessary to inform the girls of the dilemma. A general meeting was then called and the RA's asked for the girls' cooperation.
