

TO THE EDITOR: It is being stated that there is a widening gap between the races—no communication and little understanding. This is quite true. Communications have been cut off because the Negro is demanding his rights now, without promises of a better day coming. "The good white man" says "you've gone far enough, you're moving too fast." And he closes his eyes and his ears.

And now there is a group called Parents and Taxpayers United which is raising a furor about the Board of Education's decision to teach Negro history to eighth and ninth graders. This token, at least, will create some understanding. Parents and Taxpayers United says it is "boondoggery and an effort to brainwash little white children." Look how the white man has been brainwashing little black children for years by excluding Negroes from history books. It's time for a change!

The school levy will indeed be an indicator and a barometer to the people of this community.
